

Meridian Health

Taking Care of the Jersey Shore

by Jill Ocone

When it comes to health care in Monmouth and Ocean counties, there's one name that immediately jumps to the forefront: Meridian. With services ranging from in-patient care to in-home care and from women's health to emergency medicine, Meridian Health advocates the belief that life should be longer, more dynamic, and more fulfilling for all.

The mission of Meridian is to improve the health and well-being of New Jersey residents by providing the highest quality, patient-centered health care services delivered in hospital, community, and in-home settings.

With more than 15,000 team members and more than 2,700 physicians, Meridian is the largest employer in Monmouth and Ocean counties. Each year, there are more than 81,000 in-patient admissions.

Eight Hospitals And More Than One Hundred Facilities

Eight hospitals currently make up the Meridian network at the Jersey Shore, including Ocean Medical Center in Brick, Southern Ocean

Medical Center in Manahawkin, Bayshore Community Hospital in Holmdel, Jersey Shore University Medical Center and K. Hovnanian Children's Hospital in Neptune, Riverview Medical Center in Red Bank, and Raritan Bay Medical Center in Perth Amboy and Old Bridge.

The eight hospitals work together to provide the best health care experience possible for all patients, no matter how small or big the medical concern. Key services offered at each hospital include cardiovascular, pediatrics, neuroscience, orthopedics, emergency medicine, imaging and radiology, and women's health.

Jersey Shore University Medical Center has the distinction of being an academic hospital, and its Level II Trauma Center treats more than 1,600 patients each year.

Additionally, there are more than one hundred Meridian facilities in its vast network throughout the region specializing in health and fitness, rehabilitation, urgent care, after care, occupational health, behavioral health, outpatient surgery, and imaging.

Ocean Medical Center In Brick

Ocean Medical Center opened its doors in 1984 as Brick Hospital and was the sister hospital to Point Pleasant Hospital, which opened in 1918 and was located along the Manasquan River.

Several name changes, expansions, and consolidations would take place at both facilities through 2001, when Point Pleasant Hospital officially closed its doors. However, the state's first satellite emergency department opened at the former hospital site in 2001, then relocated across the canal to Point Pleasant Beach in 2004.

Today, Ocean Medical Center has 281 beds, a state-of-the-art emergency facility, a unit dedicated to acute care of the elderly, a comprehensive surgical program (including robotic technology and joint replacement), vascular services, an advanced infusion and radiology oncology department, and single room maternity units.

Southern Ocean Medical Center In Manahawkin

In the early 1970s, Southern Ocean County Hospital began as a dream for many residents of Long Beach Island. After many years of fundraising, the facility opened in 1972 with 54 beds and seventeen physicians.

The building underwent an expansion in 1980, and in 2010, Southern Ocean Medical Center changed its name and joined the Meridian network.

Today, the facility has 176 beds with more than 230 physicians serving those on Long Beach Island and the central Ocean County region.

Bayshore Community Hospital In Holmdel

The need for a hospital to serve the Bayshore community was identified in the 1960s, and in 1972, the doors to Bayshore Community Hospital opened with 158 beds.

Over the years, Bayshore has seen a number of renovation and expansion projects, including adding an assisted living residence, the John Boyd and Kathryn Roberts Mitchell Pavilion for emergency and ambulatory care services, the Ganz Ambulatory Imaging Pavilion, and centers for Wound Healing, Bariatrics, and Sleep, just to name a few.

Jersey Shore University Medical Center In Neptune

The oldest network hospital is Jersey Shore University Medical Center. It began in 1904 as a 50-bed convalescent home for women and children in Spring Lake. The land was donated by Mrs. Albionia N. Whartenby and established the home as a memorial to her late daughter, Ann May Whartenby Robinson. The convalescent home was converted to a hospital in 1905, and was renamed the Ann May Memorial Homeopathic Hospital.

In 1932, the 150-bed hospital relocated to Corlies Avenue in Neptune and was renamed the Raleigh Fitkin-Paul Morgan Memorial Hospital. Another name change occurred in 1966, when the facility was renamed Jersey Shore Medical Center - Fitkin Hospital. Several facility upgrades, renovations, and additions were made over the years.

In 1990, Jersey Shore Medical Center opened both the region's only cardiac surgery program and the Jersey Shore Regional Trauma Center; it is the only Level II trauma center with pediatric commitment in both Monmouth and Ocean counties.

In 2003, the facility became the Jersey Shore University Medical Center, reflecting its new status as a university hospital affiliate of the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey - Robert Wood Johnson Medical School.

Today, the 620-bed regional medical center specializes in cardiac care and surgery, superior cancer care, innovative orthopedics and rehabilitation, and the most comprehensive pediatrics care in the region.

K. Hovnanian Children's Hospital In Neptune

Jersey Shore Children's Hospital, which was New Jersey's first children's hospital in Monmouth and Ocean counties, was renamed the K. Hovnanian Children's Hospital at Jersey Shore University Medical Center in 2006 after a history-making donation by Kevork and Emily Hovnanian.

In 2009, a dedicated pediatric Emergency Department was added with a separate entrance and triage area.

Riverview Medical Center In Red Bank

Riverview Medical Center began in 1928 as Red Bank Hospital with only 29 beds, one operating room, one delivery room, and facilities for six newborns. Forty patients were admitted to the hospital during a two-week period in November 1928, and the total expenses for nursing salaries, groceries, gas, and electric were less than $500.

A contest was held in 1929 to change the name of the facility, and Mrs. Joseph Asay chose the name of Riverview Hospital, which was approved by the board.

Riverview was in a constant state of construction and expansion from the 1930s through the 1950s. The 1980s brought more changes, upgrades, and expansions, including the redesigned Women and Children's Pavilion, the Riverview Rehabilitation Center, the Women's Diagnostic Center, and the Booker Cancer Center.

About ten years ago, the K. Hovnanian Pavilion, including the Alton A. Hovnanian Emergency Care Center and Critical Care Center, were added as new facilities and provided patients with more space, more physicians, and new technology.

Raritan Bay Medical Center In Old Bridge And Perth Amboy

In January 2016, Meridian expanded its reach to Middlesex County with the addition of Raritan Bay Medical Center in Old Bridge and Perth Amboy. Since 1902, Raritan Bay Medical Center has been a provider of care to the men, women, and children in central New Jersey.

Today, Raritan Bay offers a total of 501 beds at its Perth Amboy and Old Bridge facilities.

Meridian Health Village at Jackson offers both private health care services and services that are traditionally limited to hospitals—all under one roof.

Meridian Health Village At Jackson

Meridian Health Village is your “one stop shop” for better health and wellness, bringing together primary and urgent care, advanced medical and surgical specialists, imaging and laboratory services, and fitness and wellness care all in a single destination.

In an easily accessible environment, this state-of-the-art medical facility offers both private health care services and services that are traditionally limited to hospitals—all under one roof.

Meridian Health Village at Jackson is the first of its kind in central New Jersey—a single destination for convenient health care. The unique Y-shaped design has both a retail and residential feel, offering a wide mix of services for the mind, body, and soul.

Wellness Education And Support Groups

Meridian Health advocates wellness education and offers a wide variety of online resources such as newsletters, articles, and information about health-related and wellness topics, including nutrition and fitness.

Providing a diverse network of classes, services, and support at each of its locations leads to a more educated and healthier community.

In addition, by sponsoring yearly events, such as “Paint the Town Pink” and the “Heart and Sole 5K,” Meridian helps to unite the community while bringing health awareness to the forefront.

A sampling of the classes and screenings hosted by Meridian Health throughout the Jersey Shore region includes AngioScreen, health fairs, smoking cessation, childbirth preparation, balance screenings, safe driving, babysitter preparation, and self-defense.

Meridian’s many support groups for individuals and families dealing with specific issues such as Alzheimer’s, cancer, substance abuse, depression, and more offer education and a shoulder to lean on. Classes and support groups are offered on a rolling basis, and most are free to attend.

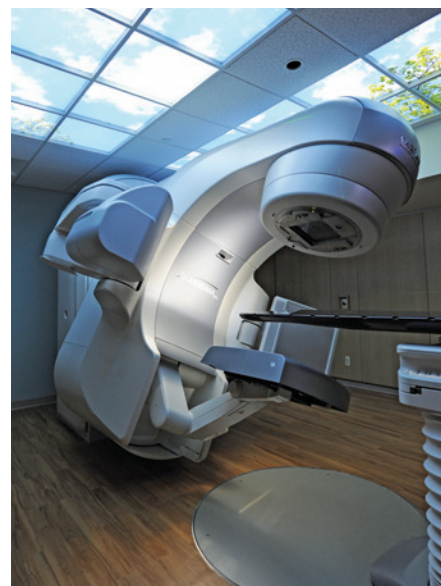

Cancer Care At Meridian

One significant expansion taking place in the Meridian network is that of Meridian Cancer Care. All Meridian affiliated hospitals have earned the American College of Surgeons Commission on Cancer accreditation with commendation for their cancer programs, which is an achievement received by less than one-third of all cancer programs across the country. Meridian is also the first health system in New Jersey to be recognized as an Integrated Network Cancer Program by the Commission on Cancer. Meridian Health recently invested $128-million to vastly improve cancer care for the Jersey Shore community, dubbed the “BuildingHope” project.

Mark Krasna, M.D., Medical

Director of Meridian Cancer Care said, “It includes new technology with state-of-the-art linear accelerators for radiation oncology and brand new chemotherapy infusion centers with an open air feeling for our patients.”

Network upgrades include the availability of state-of-the-art outpatient oncology at the new Meridian Cancer Care facility at Meridian Health Village at Jackson. Bayshore Community Hospital is expanding cancer services, while Ocean Medical Center, Riverview Medical Center and Southern Ocean Medical Center are expanding facilities, technology, and treatment options for cancer patients.

Courtesy of Meridian Health

This state-of-the-art Lin Acc (Linear Accelerator) for radiation oncology is part of the new cancer center in Jackson, and six additional units are being installed at other Meridian hospitals.

With similar enhanced features and services, Jersey Shore University Medical Center will create a new Cancer Care Center as part of its new Hope Tower, a $265-million building development on the hospital's east campus that will provide a new healing outpatient experience for the community.

"Patients could go to any of the Meridian Cancer Centers and see all the specialists for medical radiation and surgical oncology all in one place, all at one time under the same roof," said Krasna.

Meridian Cancer Care's multidisciplinary approach ensures that a patient's clinical team is made up of cancer experts from various specialty areas working together to decide the best course of treatment. Teams include specialists from medicine (including oncology, pulmonology, dermatology, hematology and more), surgeons from a wide variety of fields, hospital-based professionals such as anesthesiologists, pathologists, and radiologists, and a number of other medical authorities including dietitians, phlebotomists, nurses, and social workers.

Innovative treatment options available through Meridian Cancer Care are administered by experts with experience and training using cutting-edge procedures. Patient-centered care through surgery, radiation therapy, medical oncology, and clinical trials are some of the treatment options considered by each clinical team.

A revolutionary alternative cancer treatment called CyberKnife® has been offered at Riverview Medical Center since 2005. In fact, Meridian Cancer Care is one of a limited number of United States facilities offering patients access to the CyberKnife system. CyberKnife is a painless, non-invasive robotic radiosurgery system used for treating benign and malignant tumors, and other medical conditions. The CyberKnife is able to locate and track specific tumors, including inoperable and hard to reach tumors, without an incision or use of a scalpel. Patients' radiation sessions can be reduced from as many as forty to five-or-less because of CyberKnife's precision. More than 1,600 cancer patients have benefited from the system, which can treat several different types of cancer including brain, liver, lung, pancreatic, prostate, and spine cancer.

Meridian Cancer Care also offers a wide variety of support services for cancer patients and their families. A "Nurse Navigator," who works as an advocate and is a constant point of contact to coordinate all aspects options discovered through visionary clinical research. Additionally, patients might decide to participate in groundbreaking clinical trials when appropriate.

One of the goals of Meridian Cancer Care is to educate the community with knowledge about cancer risks, prevention strategies, and approaches to early detection. The first thing you can do to prevent cancer from striking is to incorporate simple lifestyle choices into your daily of care, is assigned to each patient. Emphasis on cancer survivorship begins at diagnosis and continues throughout each patient's life. Additionally, all patients and families are offered access to support groups, genetic counseling, palliative care, home health, hospice, rehabilitation, and integrative medicine.

routine, such as a healthy diet, physical activity, avoiding sun exposure, and not using any tobacco products or known carcinogens.

With a commitment to providing compassionate care while using the latest therapies and technology, Meridian Health is, indeed, fostering healthier and happier lives for the Jersey Shore community. ♦
