WELCOME!

Welcome to the fall/holiday edition of JERSEY SHORE, the magazine celebrating the Jersey Coast in Ocean and Monmouth counties.

The off-season at the Jersey Shore is a time of beauty and peace, and for many local residents and visitors, it is a favorite time. JERSEY SHORE Magazine and JERSEY SHORE Publications Online are designed to bring you a wealth of information to help make life more enjoyable during the Shore's "quiet time." If you're a local resident or a long-time visitor, you may find things you haven't discovered or be reminded of offerings you may have forgotten. When using these resources, you'll find a myriad of information to make your time at the Shore more rewarding and exciting.

In addition to our numerous guides, this issue's feature articles once again highlight many of the on-going themes that define this magazine—the unique people, places, history, and natural world that make up our lives at the Jersey Shore.

On our cover and throughout our pages, we are proud to present paintings and photographs by the Shore's most talented artists and photographers. This edition's cover, "Bay's Edge," was painted by Ann Hayes of Seaside Park, one of the Jersey Shore finest artists. It depicts Barnegat Bay in fall.

Throughout our guides, you'll find many places to go and things to do. Our Calendar of Events and Theater and Concert Events sections will guide you through the cultural happenings of the fall and winter seasons in the two counties. Our guides include Attractions and Activities, Parks and Recreation Areas, Historic Sites and Museums, Lighthouses, Public Golf Courses, a Fall Farm and Fun Guide, a Choose and Cut Your Own Christmas Tree Guide, and more. You'll also find guides to Stores and Shops, Art Galleries, and Dining Out and Food among others.

Also inside are our annual Holiday Shopping & Dining Guide, offering dozens of gift giving ideas as well as holiday dining suggestions, and our Catalog of Books about the Jersey Shore. Be sure to visit our Jersey Shore Books website at www.jerseyshorebooks.com.

Page through JERSEY SHORE Magazine and visit us online. May you find inspiration and discoveries to enrich your life along the beautiful New Jersey Coast.

Island Beach – A Sonnet in the Sands –

by Gordon Hesse

The Crown Jewel of the Jersey Shore

This limited-edition, oversized volume by Gordon Hesse, author of All Summer Long - Tales and Lore of Lifeguarding on the Atlantic, tells the story of the park from the time before Europeans arrived to present day.

Part One, "A Sonnet in the Sands," features the park's plant and animal life as well as its history.

Part Two, "The Lure and Lore of Island Beach," features memories and stories of the good gone days at Island Beach from people who spent much of their lives there.

Part Three, "Images of Island Beach," presents numerous unique historic and current photographs of the park.

Throughout the book are more than 385 exquisite photographs. These stunning images capture every aspect of the park in all four seasons—from the dunes and maritime forests, to the beaches, to the park's historic and current buildings, and to the sportsmen's shacks, past and present. Numerous historic photographs reveal the ultimate view into the park's past as well.

Island Beach - A Sonnet In The Sands captures the beauty of the park second only to the park itself. It is a window into its past and present, a vision now preserved for future generations.

Springsteen: His Hometown

The new, great exhibit at the Monmouth County Historical Association in Freehold

Bruce Springsteen, 1978

Frank Stefanko

One word.
Bruce.

Every Jersey Shore local and visitor knows exactly who that is. It's not Bruce the accountant, or Bruce the guy down the street, or even Bruce the Shark.

It's Bruce Springsteen, the Jersey Shore's most legendary music icon. The Springsteen: His Hometown exhibit at the Monmouth County Historical Association (MCHA) celebrates the life and story of The Boss right in his hometown of Freehold.

The exhibit officially opened on September 28 and runs through late Fall.

According to a release announcing the show, the exhibit provides a comprehensive look at how Monmouth County has been thematically woven into Bruce Springsteen's music and art throughout his career.

"Our whole museum will be filled with more than 150 items and artifacts from Bruce Springsteen's entire career, from his early days with The Castiles through his most recent 2019 release of Western Stars," said Meg Sharp Walton, Executive Director of the MCHA. "There's going to be many pieces that the public has never seen before, including a scrapbook of Springsteen's career kept by his mother, Adele."

As Springsteen is the Jersey Shore's first son, the shore is prominently woven throughout the exhibit. "This is a Monmouth County story with songs about places everybody knows about. The world meets the Jersey Shore through the words of Springsteen, and people in Sweden and Spain sing about our Route 9 when they sing along with him," Sharp Walton said.

The Springsteen: His Hometown exhibit is presented by the MCHA in cooperation with the Bruce Springsteen Archives and Center for American Music at Monmouth University and the History and Anthropology department at Monmouth University. Exhibit curators are Melissa Ziobro, Monmouth University specialist professor of public history, and Bernadette Rogoff, director of collections for the MCHA. Eileen Chapman, director of the Springsteen Archives, and Robert Santelli, founding director of the Grammy Museum in Los Angeles, are exhibit advisors.

The idea for the exhibit stemmed from one of Ziobro's Museums and Archives classes at Monmouth University, which became home to the Bruce Springsteen Archives and Center for American Music in 2017 after housing the Bruce Springsteen Special Collection since 2011. "My class started with a small exhibition at the university library as they put what they learned about curating into play. My students wanted to put the exhibit in a more visible location, so I approached the Monmouth County Historical Association to see if they were interested, and they said yes," Ziobro explained.

And from there, the exhibit took on a life of its own.

The exhibit begins in the museum's first floor Washington Gallery. A chronological story with a timeline of Springsteen's life and career snakes through the room. A looping Springsteen playlist and concert footage complement the timeline, which includes segments on his international fame, his patriotism and politics, and of course, his fans. Other items on display include a host of album covers, including alternate covers with never-before-seen artwork, a number of guitars, and the four-track recorder he used while recording his album, Nebraska.

Fans have been such an integral part of Springsteen's success that part of the exhibit along the grand stairway to the second floor features fan art.

In addition to Springsteen memorabilia, Sharp Walton noted there are a number of Freehold artifacts also on exhibition, including an old sign from the Freehold train station and large photographs from a 1950s parade on Freehold's Main Street. "The Freehold Springsteen was born into, the Freehold that he would recognize, makes up part of the second-floor exhibit," she said.

Springsteen's genealogy and ancestry, which dates as far back as the seventeenth century, is the theme of one of the second-floor rooms. Items on display from Springsteen's family line include a Civil War document that includes direct descendent Alexander Springsteen, a Medal of Honor, and a document signed in 1801 by Revolutionary War patriot and Springsteen direct descendent John Springsteen. Since the MCHA receives a large number of inquiries from people researching their own family histories, Sharp Walton said that a film about the process of researching Springsteen's genealogy will play on a loop at the exhibit. She said, "The film can be used as an example of how to research family history and how to avoid pitfalls and mistakes."

What impacted Springsteen as a child and a teenager influenced his artistry, and exhibit curators took great care to visually and aesthetically illustrate the connection. Fans who are familiar with Springsteen's lyrics will notice links to them threading throughout the displays. One such example is Springsteen's song, "Wild Billy's Circus Song," and the museum's inclusion of a Clyde Beatty-Cole Brother's Circus poster that came to town when Springsteen was a child. "That poster tells a small part of Springsteen's story," said Sharp Walton, "because he remembered it and wrote a song about it later in life."

Another example is a children's book about a cowboy that Adele Springsteen read to her son when he was a child. Years later, that same story inspired Springsteen's song, "Outlaw Pete." "So when you see the children's book about a cowboy, remember that it's so much more than a book," Sharp Walton said.

The rich music scene on the segregated west side of Asbury Park during the 1970s and 1980s also features prominently in the exhibit. "That scene included Count Basie and future E Street band members Clarence Clemons and Garry Tallent. Those after-hours jam sessions at The Upstage Club included musicians from the west side and the beach-front bands," said Sharp Walton.

According to Sharp Walton, the MCHA is planning programming to accompany the Springsteen: His Hometown exhibit. "We are planning walking tours of both Freehold and Asbury Park, as well as a poetry workshop about Springsteen's lyrics." She explained that future programming will be scheduled at both the museum and in and around Monmouth County as special events and pop-up exhibits. Sharp Walton hopes that the rights will be available next summer for this summer's film "Blinded by the Light," which was inspired by the life of journalist Sarfraz Manzoor and his love of Springsteen's music, so that it can be shown next summer as a part of Freehold's downtown summer movie series. "That would be gernails in order to put food on the table and the Jersey Shore's role in those stories, are what connects him to fans of all ages. "Bruce fans are multigenerational. I grew up listening to him because my parents loved him, and now my eight-year-old and my eleven-year-old love him too. It's amazing to see Springsteen's appeal span generations," Ziobro said.

A personal scrapbook made by Springsteen's mother, Adele, is on display.

The Boss celebrated his seventieth birthday a few days before the exhibit opened. As a poet, a surfer, an author, a motorcycle enthusiast, a humanitarian, a musician, and more over those seventy years, the Jersey Shore Renaissance man impacted history, culture, and lives so much that exhibit tickets, which have been purchased by people from all over the world, are already sold out on certain days.

"Art is a great way to tell a historical story, which Springsteen does well. He's a troubadour of American history. I hope people leave the exhibit with an understanding of where Springsteen lived and how it played a role throughout his entire life, even as we speak," Sharp Walton said. "Springsteen's story is more than a story about a musician. It's a story of American history."

Ziobro added, "Sometimes you forget just how important Springsteen is to so many people. We've been very conscientious of that. We wanted to get it [the exhibit] right, and I believe we did."

—Jill Ocone

perfect," she said.

The Springsteen story connects to more than just Jersey Shore locals and visitors, as it transcends zip codes, counties, and boundaries. "Springsteen's childhood was similar to so many others around the country in a time when community was tightly knit and culture was shifting regardless of location," Sharp Walton explained. Radical changes in society, the decline of factories and its effect on blue collar workers, and racial, counterculture, and generational conflicts occurred in every town, not just along the Jersey Shore. "What happened in Freehold and in Asbury Park during Springsteen's formative years, and what he sings about, happened all across the United States," she said.

Springsteen's devotion to his craft as a musician, combined with his creativity in writing honest lyrics about hard-working people living on the margins with dirt under their fin-

The Bruce Springsteen Archives and Center for American Music at Monmouth University

Established in 2017, The Bruce Springsteen Archives and Center for American Music at Monmouth University in Long Branch serves as the official archival repository for Bruce Springsteen's written works, photographs, periodicals, and artifacts. The Center preserves and promotes the legacy of Bruce Springsteen and his role in American music, while honoring and celebrating icons of American music like Woody Guthrie, Robert Johnson, Hank Williams, Frank Sinatra, and others.

The original collection was started by Chris Phillips, editor of Backstreets magazine, in 2001. A group known as "The Friends of the Bruce Springsteen Special Collection, Inc." assisted with managing and growing what became the Bruce Springsteen Special Collection.

Since 2011, Monmouth University has served as home of the Bruce Springsteen Special Collection, which comprises nearly 50,000 items from forty-seven countries. These items include books, concert memorabilia, articles, and promotional materials. The collection serves the research and informational needs of music fans, scholars, authors, and others with a serious interest in the life and career of The Boss.

Eileen Chapman is the Director of The Bruce Springsteen Archives and Center for American Music. Bob Santelli, founding Director of the Grammy Museum, serves as Executive Director. To learn more, visit www.monmouth.edu/springsteen-archives-and-center-for-american-music.

History Was Made Here

InfoAge's Main Visitor's Center now inhabits the former Marconi Hotel.

There's a little known thirty-seven-acre tract of land along the picturesque Shark River in Wall Township that changed the course of history and the world, yet it might be one of the Jersey Shore's best kept secrets.

The inventions, research, and discoveries made on the Camp Evans campus since the early twentieth century had a colossal impact on both the nation and the world, and today, it is home to the InfoAge Science and History Center.

In fact, the U.S. Department of Interior designated it a National Historic Landmark in 2012, the Clinton and Bush administrations named it a Save America's Treasures site, and it is a World War II Living Memorial for the State of New Jersey.

But what exactly happened at this serene riverside location just minutes from the ocean beaches to earn such accolades and distinctions?

For starters, radio pioneer Guglielmo Marconi chose it as one of the locations for the towers he built to receive trans-Atlantic wireless messages, and in 1914, it successfully received wireless messages from Europe. The top portion of one of the original, historic Marconi towers still stands tall along Marconi Road en route to the main campus of Camp Evans.

The former military base, which was manned by the United States Navy during World War I and the United States Army in World War II, also played a major role in military secrecy as radar systems developed and perfected here solidified the Allied Force's WWII victory.

"It was a top-secret project, when radar was bounced off the moon and back to the Jersey Shore," said Jim Doran, docent and member of

The top portion of one of the original, historic Marconi towers.

The InfoAge Science and History Center at Historic Camp Evans in Wall Township

the InfoAge Education Committee. "Before World War II officially ended in France, it ended here in Wall/Belmar because of that innovation." The classified projects at the Camp Evans site drew the curiosity of both a German American named Mangus Wehrkamp, who was arrested for loitering near the property in 1917, and Senator Joseph McCarthy, who in 1954 demanded to know more about what was going on in Camp Evans' secret radar facility.

According to Doran, Marconi operators also helped initiate the rescue of Titanic survivors. "They heard the ship's S-O-S call in Morse code—they heard the signal and relayed the message for help," Doran said. "That incident led to the law that wireless stations had to be manned around the clock."

Today, the property is home to 50,000 square feet of exhibits in six buildings that house over a dozen individual museums. InfoAge's Main Visitor's Center now inhabits the former Marconi Hotel, which was built to house the operators and engineers on twenty-four-hour duty at the wireless station.

"The history of the cutting edge of communications technology developed here changed New Jersey and the world," said Chris Boylan, who works part-time at InfoAge through the National Council on Aging. "InfoAge is a wonderful place, and it would be great if more people knew about it."

InfoAge's mission is to preserve, teach, and honor scientific innovation and history while inspiring new generations of thinkers, dreamers, and visionaries. It is a hub for hands-on education in science, technology, engineering, and math.

Over one hundred years of history is on display at InfoAge's various museums and exhibits. In the one-of-a-kind center, visitors can learn about the creation of wireless technology, hear early radio programs, listen to their voices bounce off the moon, program historic computers, discover the history of electronic warfare, see full-size military vehicles as well as items salvaged from shipwrecks and so much more. Following is a summary of InfoAge's various museums and exhibits.

The InfoAge Space Exploration Center (ISEC) tells the story of space exploration that led to the founding of NASA and the United States Space Program. The TIROS dish antenna on display at the center ushered in the inception of weather tracking by satellite in 1962. In fact, the antenna recorded the first image of a hurricane from space and created hurricane tracking systems that are still in use today. Also on display is the SCR271 antenna used by the former top-secret "Project Diana" in 1946 to send the first signal from the earth to the moon and back in 2.5 seconds. Other exhibits at the ISEC include models and displays about Project SCORE (Signal Communication by Orbiting Relay Equipment), which was established by President Eisenhower to develop rocket technology, and Saturn V and Apollo Program Guidance Computer Modules. ISEC hosts summer camps for children and teens and a number of lectures and public programs featuring NASA astronauts and other space dignitaries and scholars throughout the year.

The Radio Technology Museum is maintained by members of the New Jersey Antique Radio Club, who volunteer their time as guides and docents. Visitors will learn about the development of radio from before sparks through today's cell phones. The extensive exhibit of radio technology from the nineteenth century through today includes countless pieces of equipment still in working condition such as vintage radios, microphones, and even rotary and pay telephones.

The Radio Technology Museum is also home to the National Broadcasters Hall of Fame, which takes visitors back to the Golden Age of Radio when a dial was the key to entertainment, information, and good old-fashioned stories. Full radio programs from the era can be heard in their entirety. The National Broadcasters Hall of Fame includes such legends as George Burns, Edward R. Morrow, Dinah Shore, Benny Goodman, Red Skelton, Milton Berle, Frank Sinatra, Ronald Reagan, Les Brown, Larry King, and Art Linkletter.

Inside the Radio Technology Museum.

The New Jersey Shipwreck Museum is dedicated to preserving shipwreck and maritime history and is owned and operated by the New Jersey Historical Divers Association. The museum contains a multitude of artifacts recovered from area shipwrecks and an extensive collection of research materials. Several photographs and items recovered from the Morro Castle wreck off Asbury Park in September 1934 are on display, as is a cannon recovered off Long Island from the 1888 wreck of the steamer Iberia. Other relics on exhibit include a millstone recovered from the wreck site of the Adonis, which sunk off Long Branch in 1859, and items recovered from the wreck of the Mohawk, lost in 1935 off Manasquan.

The Vintage Computer Federation is at the helm of the Vintage Computer Museum, which spotlights computer history from the 1940s through modern times. Many of the computers on display are in operational condition, including 1940s-1960s mainframes, 1960s-1970s minicomputers, and 1970s-1990s microcomputers.

The World War II Tactical Communications Museum highlights army field radio, wire line, radio relay, and tactical message encryption equipment used in the Second World War. Visitors are encouraged to find the secret radio hidden in a canteen within the exhibit.

The Association of Old Crows' Exhibit focuses upon electronic warfare and demonstrates how devices can be used to prevent an enemy from utilizing their own electronics in an attack while educating about the importance of electronic warfare on the modern battlefield used to protect United States troops.

The Military Technology Museum of New Jersey is the largest exhibit at the InfoAge Science and History Center. It features a vast array of vintage, historic military artifacts, combat artwork, and memorabilia, many of which were donated by local residents. The museum also houses full-size jeeps, tanks, amphibious and other military vehicles, while detailed models and dioramas of equipment and battles, including miniature tanks, jeeps, and aircraft, almost come alive in the World War II Miniatures Museum.

The African-Americans and Camp Evans Exhibit, located inside the Marconi Hotel, celebrates the groundbreaking achievements of both military and civilian African American men and women who answered the call to serve their country during the World War II and Korean War eras in the laboratories of both Camp Evans and Fort Monmouth.

Also located within the Marconi Hotel is a detailed replica exhibit of Marconi's wireless jump across the Atlantic, which shows how wireless telegraph works along with Morse code.

The InfoAge Science and History Center offers school groups the opportunity to supplement what is being taught in today's classroom by visiting the campus and the museums. One of InfoAge's visions is a parking lot filled with yellow school buses brimming with students of the generation that's going to develop the next phase of technology. "The founders of the next Silicon Valley will hopefully have visited InfoAge and been inspired by what they saw," said Doran. A host of experts in a wide range of topics are available to present at events held by local groups, businesses, conferences, and community organizations through InfoAge's Speakers Bureau.

With plans for more museums, exhibits, and displays in the works, the InfoAge Science and History Center continues to evolve with the present while preserving the past for future generations.

The InfoAge Science and History Center at Historic Camp Evans is located at 2201 Marconi Road in Wall Township. It is open Wednesdays, Saturdays, and Sundays from 1:00 PM to 5:00 PM. Admission: $7. (ages 13 and up); $4. (ages 12 and younger). Visitors are encouraged to dress for weather as you will be outside as you travel to the various buildings. Parking is free. Special events and group/school tours are available by appointment.

In order to continue honoring veterans and providing a place of learning for all, InfoAge offers yearly memberships and accepts tax-deductible donations. To learn more, volunteer, or donate, visit www.infoage.org or call (732) 280-3000.

Jersey Shore BBQ

Smoking the Shore One Rack at a Time

Doug Walsh, owner of Jersey Shore BBQ in Belmar.

The intoxicating smell as you walk into Belmar's Jersey Shore BBQ (JSBBQ) is so full of smoky richness, you can almost taste your meal before you've even ordered it. That tantalizing aroma and the non-stop cycle of customers is evidence that owner Doug Walsh knows BBQ like nobody else.

Walsh spent a few years living in Texas, and after helping a buddy with a BBQ catering gig on a ranch, he fell in love with the process of preparing BBQ and began cooking it himself. "Texas BBQ has such a unique, smoky flavor. My passion is creating that taste, and after cooking for friends and family, I launched my own business called Jersey Shore BBQ Catering," Walsh said.

After catering out of his Point Pleasant home for three years, Walsh looked for a commercial kitchen to house the catering business. The Belmar location fell into his lap, and he opened the restaurant in 2010.

"We took a leap and my passion turned into a career," Walsh said. During JSBBQ's first four years, Walsh also worked full-time as an information technology consultant during the day until he decided to focus full-time on the restaurant. JSBBQ is a family business, with Walsh's wife, Dana (who serves as their coordinator of donations and outreach), and his children, Grace (seventh grade) and Douglas (sixth grade) helping with catering events and in the store.

In March 2017, the Walsh family, along with Denis Barnao, opened a second location in East Brunswick.

JSBBQ promises a consistent, savory, slow-cooked, artisanal experience. Everything on the menu, except for the rolls and beverages, are made in-house from scratch, including the sauces. Their casual Belmar atmosphere combines a down-home Texas feel with a laid back beach vibe typical of the shore.

It takes JSBBQ between sixteen and forty-eight hours to prepare one meal, which is why top-selling items like the brisket and ribs often sell out quickly, especially on Fridays and Saturdays. Service Manager Dan Serpi said, "Our attention to traditional BBQ detail is what sets us apart from other places. If we run out of brisket, which we often do, we don't sacrifice quality by rushing another batch."

Walsh explained the process to create his award-winning, smoked meats. First, the meat is hand-seasoned with a custom blend of spices known as a dry rub. Then it is cooked in a smoker filled with local hardwoods where it bastes for hours. "This is what creates the distinctive and unique taste symbolic of Jersey Shore BBQ," he said. "We do not flash-create our meals, so we apologize if we have already sold out of something a customer wants to order."

While JSBBQ is known for its smoked brisket, other customer menu favorites include The Longhorn Sandwich (their signature sandwich—chopped brisket burnt ends topped with jalapenos, grilled onions, and pepper jack cheese), The "Steve" Sandwich (pulled pork topped with "Benny" sauce, collards, provolone, and garlic aioli), and the Monmouth Trifecta (choice of three meats including pulled pork, pulled chicken, sliced beef brisket, kielbasa, St. Louis Ribs, or smoked turkey breast). Also popular is their extensive choice of homemade sides: sweet potato fries, cole slaw, bacon potato salad, mac 'n' cheese, ranch beans, hand-cut fries, JSBBQ pickles, tomato cucumber salad, collard greens, corn bread, or small house salad.

Other JSBBQ signature menu items include a wide array of appetizers, nachos, quesadillas, burgers, and greens. There are also several vegan and gluten free options on the menu. "We have a server who cannot eat gluten, so she helps with our gluten free items and being careful about cross-contamination of food. Believe it or not, our sauces are gluten free, and we offer salads in place of bread and vegetables," Walsh said.

JSBBQ's catering service is still as active as ever and grows every season. They work with customers to design a menu to fit the needs of every budget and event. "We can handle any event, small gatherings to large weddings. It's what we do best and the cornerstone of the business," Walsh said. Services offered by JSBBQ Catering include made-on-site entrees and desserts, and prices include set-up and delivery.

New this year is a line of custom sodas, which was Serpi's idea. "Island Girl Beverages in Hasbrouck Heights bottles them for us, and our flavors complement the taste of any type of BBQ," Serpi said. Current flavors include raspberry lime, root beer, diet root beer, birch beer, orange, and black cherry.

Serpi said that what he loves most about his job is that it is family friendly. "Here, you're not a number as an employee or a customer. You are part of Doug's family, and he's a really good guy."

Walsh is humble about his mastery of BBQ, but the countless awards he's received speak for themselves. "My favorite award is the 'NJ Magazine Readers Choice Award for Best BBQ in New Jersey.' We won that in 2013 and in 2017," Walsh said.

Behind the scenes of the restaurant and catering business, JSBBQ thrives upon giving back to the local community. "We opened our kitchen as a soup kitchen during Superstorm Sandy to feed volunteers and victims," Walsh said. JSBBQ works hand in hand with other local businesses every year, including Point Pleasant Beach's Point Lobster Company and Atlantic Spear and Scuba, to benefit local children who are stricken with medical issues and out-of-pocket expenses related to those issues. JSBBQ also actively supports local youth sports teams, parent-teacher organizations, and the Valentine House in Point Pleasant Beach.

Last fall, the restaurant donated a lunch, in collaboration with the Gary Sinise Foundation, to the NBC TV show "George to the Rescue," which filmed an episode featuring Jersey Shore army veteran Tyler McGibbin, who was injured in Kuwait. McGibbin's home was rebuilt to better accommodate his injuries with help from other Jersey Shore locals, including Point Pleasant businesses Tracy Pearce Interior Design and Brian Cole Plumbing.

With his restaurant now a staple of the Jersey Shore, Walsh looks forward to what the future will bring. "The key to success for any business is to continue to evolve, and during the off-season, we will tweak our menu and continue to build our brand and become an even better restaurant and catering business."

A former cranberry bog and tree farm, the natural beauty of the park lends itself to a unique 1.4 mile self-guided nature trail which meanders through the farm and into undisturbed woodlands, offering an escape from every day life. Also on the grounds are original buildings from the Collins' family farm, dating back to the early 1900s. The Nature Center, opened in May 2015, contains exhibits that highlight the natural beauty and historical significance of the park and is open on Fri., Sat., Sun., and by chance during the rest of the week.

DEEP CUT GARDENS

152 Red Hill Road, Middletown

(732) 671-6050 or (732) 842-4000

www.monmouthcountyparks.com

Deep Cut Gardens is dedicated to the home gardener. The 54 acres of gardens and greenhouses are planned as a living catalog of cultivated and native plant materials to be observed through the seasons. Whether identifying the specimens in the gardens, questioning the horticultural staff, or perusing the books and magazines in the horticultural reference library, you will discover ways to improve your home garden. While there, visit the Home Compost Demonstration Area. Views of the surrounding countryside, shade, seating, and picnic tables.

You'll feel many miles away from civilization as you travel the trails of this park. Features include group cabin camping (by reservation), cross country ski trails, fishing in the Navesink River, and trails for walking, hiking, biking, and horseback riding. Adventure, exercise, and relaxation await you on the nineteen-mile trail system of this 787-acre park. It's the perfect place to escape the sounds of suburbia. A historic World War II naval gun from the Battleship New Jersey is now on permanent display as a part of the Battery Lewis restoration.

HENRY HUDSON TRAIL

Aberdeen/Keyport border to Atlantic Highlands, and Matawan to Freehold Activity Center: 945 Route 36, Leonardo (732) 842-4000

www.monmouthcountyparks.com

This paved, ten-foot wide, 22-mile long trail is a former railroad right-of-way. It is relatively flat, traveling through both man-made and natural environments. Much of the trail is tree-lined, though some parts have views of surrounding wetlands, streams, and fields. The northern trail section runs ten miles (just north of and parallel to Route 36) from the Aberdeen/Keyport border at the intersection of Lloyd Road and Clark Street to the Leonardo section of Middletown/Atlantic Highlands border at Avenue D. Work is underway to extend the Henry Hudson Trail another twelve miles to Freehold Borough. Currently, the trail runs four miles from Route 537 in Freehold to Stevenson Drive in Marlboro. The trail then resumes at Station Road in Marlboro and continues for five miles to Church Street in Matawan. Future plans for the Trail include linking these two sections of trail and providing a connection to the original northern section of the Henry Hudson Trail. The park totals 100 acres. Note: Trail conditions are primitive and users should expect wet and muddy patches, with no alternate route around.

HOLMDEL PARK AND HISTORIC LONGSTREET FARM

44 Longstreet Road, Holmdel

(732) 946-3758 or (732) 842-4000

www.monmouthcountyparks.com

This 572-acre park features hiking and fitness trails, fishing and skating ponds, tennis courts, playgrounds, picnic areas, a sledding hill, and more. Historic Longstreet Farm, located in the park, is a living history farm that maintains life as it was during the 1890s. Costumed interpreters work the farm as it was over a hundred years ago. Come see the 14-room farmhouse, live animals, agricultural fields, and barnyard! The park is also home to the David C. Shaw Arboretum, a 22-acre educational and horticultural display devoted to trees, shrubs, and other woody plants that grow in Monmouth County. Activities, guided tours, and children's programs are available. Open everyday except Christmas. The farmhouse is open only on weekends.

HUBER WOODS PARK

25 Brown's Dock Road

Locust section of Middletown

(732) 872-2670 or (732) 842-4000

www.monmouthcountyparks.com

Enjoy a fabulous view of the Navesink River and relax as you get away from it all on one of the trails. This park features 366 acres of forest and meadows. Other attractions include eight miles of multi-use trails, and the Environmental Center with hands-on nature displays. A visit to Huber Woods Park is the perfect opportunity to appreciate facets of nature that are often taken for granted. Take time amid the scenic beauty and panoramic views to observe the small things—the sounds, smells, lights and shadows, and subtle hints of seasonal changes. Relax in a meadow or take a walk along a wooded trail. Each experience will enhance your appreciation of the fascinating natural world around you.

MILL CREEK COUNTY PARK AND FLORENCE T. ALLEN CONSERVATION AREA
110 and 111 Chelsea Avenue
Berkeley Township, 1-877-OC PARKS
www.oceancountyparks.org

Mill Creek County Park is located in Berkeley Township between Pine Beach and Ocean Gate. Cedar chip trails, the Mill Creek, the Toms River, and three playgrounds make this a scenic and inviting park. The park's 14 acres offer the perfect spot for a family picnic under the pavilion or at one of several secluded picnic tables. Basketball, conservation area, trails, grills, restrooms, handicapped accessible. This park is also the future site of the Ocean County Sailing Center. The Florence T. Allen Conservation Area consists of 45 acres of cedar swamp and uplands bordering Mill Creek. These wetlands protect Mill Creek as it flows into the Toms River.

MONMOUTH BATTLEFIELD AND MONMOUTH BATTLEFIELD STATE PARK
16 Business Route 33, Manalapan
(732) 462-9616
www.state.nj.us/dep/parksandforests/parks/monbat.html

This is where Molly Pitcher became famous during a Revolutionary battle. It was on the Monmouth Battlefield that General Washington and General Sir Henry Clinton faced each other. This victory convinced the British that the revolutionaries were a force to contend with and not just a ragtag rabble. This is also the setting for the historic Craig House. Learn more about the rich history of Monmouth Battlefield through wayside exhibits located on Perrine Hill, Combs Hill, and the Hedgerow. Visitors Center, birding, picnic areas, trails, and playgrounds. Sledding and cross-country skiing in winter.

MOUNT MITCHILL SCENIC OVERLOOK
460 Ocean Boulevard, Atlantic Highlands
(732) 842-4000
www.monmouthcountyparks.com

This is the Jersey Shore's highest point—266 feet above sea level—and is the second highest point on the Atlantic seaboard (after Maine's Cadillac Mountain at Acadia National Park). The overlook's 12 acres offer spectacular views of Sandy Hook, Raritan Bay, and the NYC skyline and features picnic tables and a playground. Mount Mitchell is home to Monmouth County's 9/11 Memorial. The memorial is a tribute to the 147 men and women born, raised, or residing in Monmouth County who lost their lives in the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001.

OCEAN COUNTY PARK
659 Ocean Avenue (Route 88), Lakewood
1-877-OC PARKS
www.oceancountyparks.org

This magnificent 323-acre facility in Lakewood has a rich and fascinating history. Ocean County Park was originally part of Financier John D. Rockefeller's vacation estate. White pine, hemlock, and other unique specimen trees, now mature, were imported by Rockefeller from all over the country. Fitness and bike trails, tennis courts, open playing fields, beach volleyball, canoeing, fishing, and even a driving range, all free of charge, appeal to adults of all ages. Children will delight in using the playgrounds or swimming in the large, clean swimming lake on hot summer days. Ocean County Park has a large, accessible picnic facility. Reservations are available for a nominal fee for up to 700 persons. Warm weather isn't the only time to enjoy this park. Transformed into a lovely and silent winter wonderland after a snowfall, it's a great site for cross-country skiing. Of course, there is no charge for casual use of the park, the beach, or its many facilities. An off-leash dog park area is also available. Yearly fee applies. Visit website for details.

National Recreation Area features seven miles of beaches (with lifeguards in summer), evening beach concerts, hiking trails, salt marshes, and over three hundred species of birds. Ranger (and self-guided) tours are available year-round. The park is open daily, sunrise to sunset. Located near the tip of this seven-mile barrier peninsula, is the historic Sandy Hook Lighthouse. Built at the request of New York merchants wanting to protect their ships entering the harbor, it was lighted for the first time on June 11, 1764. The octagonal tower was the fifth lighthouse in the colonies and remains the oldest operating lighthouse in the U.S. today. The Lighthouse was occupied by British soldiers during the American Revolution and was bombarded by cannons served by Patriot troops. It was also the sanctuary to local refugees who were sympathizers of the King. The grounds around the Lighthouse are open daily, and a video program can also be viewed. The Lighthouse itself is open daily for tours and climbs that are guided by National Park Service Rangers and Volunteers-in-the-Park from 1:00 PM - 4:30 PM. While there, also visit the Fort Hancock Historic District. Built in 1898, Fort Hancock includes gun batteries and over one hundred buildings. Start your visit at the Fort Hancock Museum; then visit History House, an 1890s officers' home. History House is open weekends 1:00 PM - 5:00 PM. Special use fees for beach parking are charged, while entry to the historic district is free. The Sandy Hook Visitor's Center is located at the Lighthouse Keepers Quarters in Fort Hancock. It features exhibits on the peninsula's natural environment and is open daily 9:00 AM - 5:00 PM. An 1894 U.S. Life-Saving Station at Spermaceti Cove was closed after Superstorm Sandy and is currently not open to the public.

SEVEN PRESIDENTS OCEANFRONT PARK

221 Ocean Avenue North, Long Branch

(732) 229-7025 or (732) 842-4000

www.monmouthcountyparks.com

This 38-acre park was named to honor seven presidents who vacationed in the immediate area. In the summer, its guarded beach is a great place to swim, sun, and surf. During the off-season, it is a nice place for a quiet walk. Park features include an activity center, access to launch personal watercraft, fishing, a playground, swimming, sand volleyball, pavilion with snack bar, and restrooms. New improvements include a regulation in-line skating rink, a skate park, a shelter, and parking area. The park is open every day from 8:00 AM to dusk.

SHARK RIVER PARK

1101 Schoolhouse Road, Wall Township

(732) 922-4080 or (732) 842-4000

www.monmouthcountyparks.com

Established in 1960 with surplus land from construction of the Garden State Parkway, Shark River Park is the first and oldest Monmouth County Park. There are more than 985 acres along either side of the Shark River in Neptune and Wall Township. A variety of picnic facilities host thousands of park visitors each year. Children can enjoy the playground year-round. The park's waterways, trails, hills, forests, and ponds attract birders, anglers, hikers, and nature lovers, and in the winter, cross-country skiers and ice skaters.

THOMPSON PARK

805 Newman Springs Road, Lincroft

(732) 842-4000 ext. 4312

www.monmouthcountyparks.com

Established in 1968 when Geraldine Thompson bequeathed the famed 19th century horse estate "Brookdale Farm" to the citizens of Monmouth County, Thompson Park's 667 acres now serve as headquarters for the Monmouth County Park System. The preserved historic buildings offer a rich glimpse into the area's past, while the surrounding fields, trails, and lake provide a beautiful location for outdoor activities. Visitors can enjoy the playground, Craft Center, Visitor Center, off-leash dog area, fishing and boating on Marlu Lake (car-top vessels only), tennis courts, athletic fields, and a large picnic area.

TURKEY SWAMP PARK

200 Georgia Road, Freehold Township

(732) 462-7286 or (732) 842-4000

www.monmouthcountyparks.com

Turkey Swamp features 2,111 acres including a 17-acre lake for fishing, boating, and skating. Fish for bass, catfish, or bluegills either from the shore or from canoes and paddleboats that you can rent in summer. Nine miles of multi-use and fitness trails traverse the park. There is also an archery range and playgrounds. Get back to nature by spending the night at the family campground or reserve a picnic shelter for your next big group picnic. The family campground offers campsites, electrical service, water service (April 1 - November 15), drinking water, modern restroom with hot showers and laundry, a self serve sanitary dump station for campers with holding tanks, fire rings for charcoal cooking and campfires, picnic tables, and a children's playground.

WELLS MILLS COUNTY PARK AND NATURE CENTER

905 Wells Mills Road (Route 532), Waretown

(609) 971-3085 or 1-877-OC PARKS

www.oceancountyparks.org

Wells Mills has the distinction of being the largest park in the Ocean County Park System, with over 900 acres of pine and oak forest within southern New Jersey's environmental marvel, the Pine Barrens. Miles of hiking trails, with varying degrees of difficulty, can be found here, including a visually impaired persons trail. The three-story Nature Center offers a great display floor, a library, and the third floor Elizabeth Meirs Morgan Observation Deck. Environmental programs and classes, with experienced naturalists, are held regularly. The monthly "Full Moon Hikes" are but one of the popular events taking place here. The annual "Pine Barrens Jamboree" held each October is an event not to be missed. Beautiful Wells Mills Lake has trails meandering around it, and is perfect for a leisurely stroll through the Pine Barrens. Bike trails, canoe rentals (seasonal), conservation area, fishing, Nature Center, open playing fields, picnic area, playground, restrooms. ♦

HISTORIC SITES

and Museums in Monmouth and Ocean Counties

THE BAILEY-REED HOUSE MUSEUM SQUAN VILLAGE HISTORICAL SOCIETY 105 South Street, Manasquan (732) 223-6770

The original section of this home was built in the late 1700s, with additions to the building over the next several decades. The museum contains a circa 1850 parlor, a circa 1900 dining room, and the original part of the home is furnished in the 1700 period. The second floor has a circa 1850s furnished bedroom, a research room, a Manasquan room, a Nautical room, a "theme" room, and a general store where purchases are available. Behind the museum is the Carriage House/Barn. Currently being renovated, the beams in this out-building are the spars from the shipwreck The Thistle from the early 1800s. Open on the second Sunday of each month 1:00 PM - 4:00 PM. Tours by appointment.

BARNEGAT LIGHT MUSEUM 501 Central Avenue, Barnegat Light (609) 494-8578 www.BL-HS.org

Considered one of the best maritime museums on the East Coast. Featuring artifacts, replicas, and photographs depicting the history of Barnegat Light and Long Beach Island and the fishing industry. The museum, once a one-room schoolhouse for Barnegat Light, is now on the National Register of Historical Places. Open daily in July and August from 10:00 AM - 4:00 PM. Open weekends in June and September 10:00 AM - 4:00 PM. Tours are available by appointment. The beautiful Museum Gardens are open all year.

BAY HEAD HISTORICAL SOCIETY MUSEUM 1643 Bay Avenue (corner of Bay and Bridge Avenues), Point Pleasant (732) 892-0223 www.bayheadhistoricalsociety.com

The Bay Head Historical Society Museum is open to the public seasonally from May to October. This 1867 farm home with outstanding interior woodwork has been restored to its former glory. The museum is home to memorabilia and history of life in this part of the Jersey Shore. An exhibit of turn-of-the-century photographs of the area plus artifacts and heirlooms donated by local residents are on permanent display during the season. The front salon is a gallery for changing displays of local art and special area exhibits. The Victorian garden, the sea grass garden, and the lilac memorial garden are outstanding. Completing the complex is the Dale Cottage, which celebrates the maritime heritage of the area. Open Fri. - Mon. 1:00 PM - 4:00 PM. Groups by appointment.

THE CHURCH OF THE PRESIDENTS 1260 Ocean Avenue, Long Branch www.churchofthepresidents.org

In the late 1800s, Long Branch prospered and grew from the nation's first seashore resort to the "summer capital of the nation." Seven U.S. Presidents (Grant, Hayes, Wilson, Garfield, Arthur, Harrison, and McKinley) all chose to summer here and worship. In 1881, the St. James Episcopal Chapel was built and consecrated. Constructed in the traditional shape of a cross, its architecture resembles a cottage of the pseudo-Tudor design which was popular in the 1880s. Now the home of the Long Branch Historical Museum, it contains artifacts and memorabilia relating to Long Branch's national historical role, the original altar, transepts, and part of the nave are preserved. While there, visit Seven Presidents Oceanfront Park on the corner of Ocean and Joline Avenues (732-842-4000). This 38-acre park was named to honor the seven presidents who vacationed in the immediate area.

JOHN F. PETO STUDIO MUSEUM 102 Cedar Avenue, Island Heights (732) 929-4949 www.petomuseum.org

The mission of this museum is the preservation of the John F. Peto legacy by maintaining his 115-year-old house and studio as a working museum, by fostering educational opportunities in the arts, and by serving as a community partner. Guests will see the original studio, artifacts, and furnishing used by Peto, who lived and worked in Island Heights from 1890 to 1907. Today, Peto is recognized as one of America's most important still life painters. His works are found in the world's finest museums, including the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York and the National Gallery of Art in Washington DC. His artwork is dominated by rich colors and enhanced lighting. He often used the "fool the eye" technique known as trompe l'oeil. Open Sat. and Sun. 1:00 PM - 4:00 PM; Mon. - Fri. by appointment. Admission: adults: $10.; children twelve and under: $5.

BARNEGAT LIGHTHOUSE

Broadway and the Bay, Barnegat Light (609) 494-2016

www.state.nj.us/dep/parksandforests/parks/barnlig.html

More commonly known as "Old Barney," the lighthouse is the New Jersey Shore's most familiar landmark. The 172-foot tower, marking the entrance to Barnegat Inlet, was built in 1858. Climb the 217 steps to the top for amazing, breathtaking views from every angle. The park offers facilities for picnicking and fishing. Open: Memorial Day - Labor Day, daily 10:00 AM - 4:30 PM. Admission: ages 12 and older: $3.; 6 to 11: $1.; 5 and under: free. Labor Day - Memorial Day, Wed. - Sun. 9:00 AM - 3:30 PM. Admission is free in the off-season.

ROMER SHOAL LIGHTHOUSE

Off Sandy Hook
www.romershoal.org

The shoal and lighthouse are named for the William J. Romer, a vessel which sank here in 1863. Both are located in the approach to the Verrazano Narrows of New York Harbor on the east side of what is known as Ambrose Channel. It is visible from Sandy Hook and the eastern Bayshore region. The maroon and white harbor beacon dates back to 1898. The light was significantly damaged by Hurricane Sandy and remediation, recovery, and renovation work is currently underway. Maintained by the Coast Guard. Closed to the public.

SANDY HOOK LIGHTHOUSE

www.nps.gov/gate/planyourvisit/sandy-hook-hours.htm

Located near the tip of this seven-mile barrier peninsula is the historic Sandy Hook Lighthouse. Lighted for the first time on June 11, 1764, the octagonal tower was the fifth lighthouse in the colonies and remains the oldest operating lighthouse in the U.S. today. The Lighthouse was occupied by British soldiers during the American Revolution and was bombarded by cannons served by Patriot troops. It was also the sanctuary to local refugees who were sympathizers of the King. The grounds around the Lighthouse are open daily, and a video program can also be viewed. The Lighthouse itself is open daily for tours and climbs that are guided by National Park Service Rangers and Volunteers-in-the-Park from 1:00 PM - 4:30 PM. Lighthouse Keepers Quarters/Visitor Center open daily 9:00 AM - 5:00 PM. Children must be at least 48 inches tall to climb the lighthouse. Seasonal park admission fees may apply; please check website for park fees and hours.

SEA GIRT LIGHTHOUSE

www.seagirtlighthouse.com

In March 1889, Congress approved funds for the establishment of a lighthouse to bridge the forty-mile gap between the Twin Lights Of Navesink and Barnegat Light. In July 1895, a site was chosen: Sea Girt at Wreck Pond, overlooking the Atlantic. One year later, on December 10, 1896, its beacon was illuminated. It would become the last live-in lighthouse to be built on the Atlantic Coast. Five station keepers manned the light from 1896 to 1940. A protector of those at sea, its original Fresnel lens focused the light from a kerosene lamp that could be seen for fifteen miles. During World War II, the Coast Guard patrolled the beaches and used the lighthouse to monitor the U-boat menace off the coast. Today, organizations use this preserved historic site as a meeting place, and schools visit for class trips. Inside are period furnishings, paintings, historic maps, local photographs, and lighthouse memorabilia. Open from the week after Easter through the week of Thanksgiving on Sundays, 2:00 PM - 4:00 PM; closed on major holidays. Donations welcome.

TUCKER'S ISLAND LIGHTHOUSE

Tuckerton Seaport, 120 West Main Street (Route 9), Tuckerton, (609) 296-8868
www.TuckertonSeaport.org

Tucker's Island Lighthouse is a reproduction of the light that was built in 1868 on Tucker's Island, a five-mile island off Long Beach Island that slowly disappeared into the sea between the mid-1920s and 1952. The island had residents, a school, two hotels, and a Coast Guard station. When you enter the building, look for photos of the original lighthouse as it collapsed into the sea on October 12, 1927. The lighthouse contains exhibits on New Jersey maritime history and the people who lived it, including the stories of shipwrecks, lighthouse keepers, and the U.S. Lifesaving Service. From the second floor, you can climb the forty-two steps to the top of the tower for a beautiful view of Tuckerton Seaport and Lake Pohatcong. Open daily 10:00 AM - 5:00 PM. Closed major holidays. Admission: adults: $8.; seniors (62 and older): $6.; children 6 - 12: $5.; children 5 and under are free. Please refer to the listing for "Tuckerton Seaport" under "Attractions & Activities."

TWIN LIGHTS OF NAVESINK

Lighthouse Road (off Route 36), Highlands (732) 872-1814

Twin Lights Of Navesink is a brownstone double lighthouse. This two-beacon light marked the western entrance to New York Harbor. The south tower became the first electrically operated lighthouse in the United States. The present towers, rising 250 feet above the Sandy Hook Bay, were constructed in 1862. Though decommissioned in 1952, local organizations had a 500-watt blinker light installed in 1962 as a reminder of the Light's heritage. Marconi conducted the first ship-to-shore broadcast here. The museum's exhibit centers around the history of the Twin Lights, marine history, and the U.S. Life-Saving Service. Park and building hours change seasonally and are affected by inclement weather. Britta Wenzel

The Caretaker of Barnegat Bay

by Jill Ocone

When you combine a formidable Norwegian ancestry with a lifetime of living along Jersey Shore waters, the result is a passionate Jersey Girl with an unparalleled appreciation for the local ecosystem.

Meet Britta [Forsberg] Wenzel, the Executive Director of Save Barnegat Bay.

Wenzel was born in 1970 and raised along the northern bay, where it bends westward along Point Pleasant, past her namesake, Forsberg's Boat Works, becoming Beaver Dam Creek. The bay has provided the Forsberg family with a livelihood from the early twentieth century to today. With the bay at the core of Wenzel's heart and soul, she's been actively advocating for its protection since she was young.

After graduating Point Pleasant Boro High School in 1989, and while attending Ocean County College, Wenzel became very active with a student environmental group called the Environmental Education Network (EEN). One of her first projects with EEN was instituting a textbook recycling program. "Instead of putting old textbooks that were no longer being used into a landfill, we made them available to prisons and lesser advantaged schools," she said. She was also instrumental in bringing Woodstock icon Richie Havens to perform at an early 1990s Earth Day Celebration at Ocean County College.

It should come as no surprise that Wenzel was named Ocean County's "Environmentalist of the Year" at only eighteen years old. At the time, she assisted with writing the New Jersey School Source Separation and Recycling Act, which was sponsored by local legislators including Marlene Lynch Ford.

After attending an environmental conference at Stockton College (now Stockton University), she transferred there and became involved with campus, state, and national environmental groups. "I helped to perform energy and waste audits on campus and advocated for wetlands protection and open space preservation. That was the way to solve problems for people. Environmental and social justice issues needed action, and I couldn't understand why humanity couldn't work on the solutions," said Wenzel.

In an unexpected twist, Wenzel ended up challenging Stockton over their plan to develop a parking lot in the buffer of an Atlantic White Cedar Bog and won her case, but she had to leave college to help care for her ailing father. Shortly after, while working at Red's Lobster Pot in Point Pleasant Beach, she met her future husband, Brick. "When you grow up and live in a coastal community, almost everyone you know is involved in that economy...they cook at a restaurant, bartend, fish or work at the dock, retail, and of course, tourism," said Wenzel. "My husband was in the commercial fishing industry, and with my family's boatyard, we ended up knowing a lot of the same people," she said.

After marrying in 1997 and settling near Brick's family in Lavallette, the Wenzels operated Salty's, an ice cream parlor, eatery, and gift shop. Unfortunately, Salty's was heavily damaged by Superstorm Sandy, but by that time, Wenzel was already at the helm as Save Barnegat Bay's Executive Director. "We tried to reopen the store, but it was just too much," Wenzel said.

Before the Wenzels survived Sandy, they survived running against each other for Lavallette Town Council, with sitting Councilman Brick on the Republican ticket and Britta on the Democratic ticket. "We showed everyone that we can get along as husband and wife despite our different party affiliations," Wenzel said. "The first time I ran against him I lost, but then, I eventually won with less than two hundred registered Democrats in town which was a little unusual."

As a Lavallette Councilwoman from 2004 through 2009, Wenzel believed that local politics shouldn't necessarily be about party lines but about what's best for the community. "The police, public works, schools... you want them to do a good job with the best value regardless of party affiliations," Wenzel explained.

While a Councilwoman, Wenzel worked hard to improve Lavallette's recycling rates and garbage schedule, and her efforts led to the rebuilding of the Lavallette boardwalk, which unfortunately, also fell victim to Sandy. She stated, "I loved my time in local public service. I enjoyed helping people and solving problems because it made us serve each other better."

Despite an unsuccessful bid for Lavallette Mayor, Wenzel's passion for social justice continued to burn. "I always want to fight for better outcomes when I see something unjust," she said. She was already on the Board of Directors of Save Barnegat Bay, and instead of running for public office again, she chose the bay. "I'm a local person who grew up on the bay at a boatyard. I love the sound of the bay, the feel and beauty of the bay, and the life it gave me. I wanted to fight for that full time," she said.

What is now known as Save Barnegat Bay was founded in 1971 as a non-profit organization and originally called the Ocean County Chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America. The group was started at a kitchen table by Charles Hudlund and neighbors who were concerned about plans to develop what are known today as the F-Cove and Traders Cove at the northern end of the bay. In 1985, the group's name was changed to Save Barnegat Bay, and it has kept its non-profit status since inception. In April 2012, after spending thirteen years as a board member, Wenzel was named executive director.

"The public thinks Save Barnegat Bay has been around for the last thirty years or so, but the health of Barnegat Bay has been in decline for more than fifty years," Wenzel explained.

An adverse effect of Ocean County's rapid growth and constant development over the last half century has been polluted runoff into the watershed, which has been a major contributing factor to the bay's deterioration. As the bay's health became threatened, the group refocused its attention from preservation of open space to the numerous factors that affect the bay and its ecosystem.

Barnegat Bay's brackish water runs deep through Wenzel's veins. "I grew up on the bay. I remember when there were so many more crabs and fish because the water was cleaner. Maybe folks can't perceive something is wrong because they haven't lived here all of their lives, but I have. I've been called an 'environmentalist', but I think everyone wants clean water, clean air, and clean food," Wenzel said.

Since 2002, invasive stinging sea nettles have made swimming in Barnegat Bay nearly impossible. The sea nettles are a result of development and runoff into the bay.

Wenzel explained that the small creatures pack a giant sting that has sent many a swimmer seeking medical attention. "As development increased, the sea nettles have more places such as floating docks, pilings, and bulkheads to cling to and reproduce," she said. Other problematic jellies such as box and clinging jellyfish have also arrived in the bay during recent years.

As executive director, Wenzel works directly with local and state officials, policy makers, legislators, and residents. By combining her background in politics, her experience from running local businesses, and her wisdom gleaned from her environmental activism, Wenzel recognizes her expertise strengthens the impact made by the non-profit organization. "It's unusual for a director to have all of those backgrounds and connections, and it's a privilege to serve in this position because I am able to bring all of that together in our effort to restore Barnegat Bay," she said.

Save Barnegat Bay is unique in that it both advocates for the bay by being a strong and independent voice while educating the Jersey Shore community about the bay's natural, economic, and recreational resources that can be enjoyed by everyone. Wenzel said, "Whether you are politically on the far left, the far right, or in the middle, it doesn't matter how you come to us if you are in it for the bay."

It's not always easy when the organization tries to resolve issues with development, runoff, and water quality. In fact, it can get downright messy. "It's okay if people disagree with me, but they have to remember we are fighting for our quality of life and the local economy along the Barnegat Bay Watershed. That involves thirty-seven municipalities with mayors, councilmembers, green teams, environmentalists, politicians, business people, and residents. Maybe we won't always win, but we are there for the bay, no matter what," she said.

Wenzel works hand in hand with Save Barnegat Bay's Board of Directors and president, William deCamp, Jr. "That shows the stability of our organization," she said. "He's been president for over thirty years."

Superstorm Sandy devastated Save Barnegat Bay's Lavallette office in 2012. Three relocations later, they moved to their current location in 2017—a forty-acre site that is owned by Toms River Township and was purchased with the support of Green Acres Funds. The new location is more than just an office. It ushered in the dawn of the EcoCenter. "The EcoCenter is a wonderful home base for education, advocacy, and engagement," said Wenzel.

Under Wenzel's leadership, Save Barnegat Bay's focus on education and community engagement led to Save Barnegat Bay's EcoCenter in Toms River.

Save Barnegat Bay's EcoCenter

Save Barnegat Bay's EcoCenter is located where the bay meets the land in Toms River and is also home to the mouth of the Long Swamp Creek, which feeds the bay with fresh water. The property is open to the public and loved by the surrounding community. It is used regularly by the public for dog walking and enjoyment as it has extensive foot trails and a white, sandy beach.

Their Mission

The EcoCenter's Mission is to increase science literacy about Barnegat Bay, to model bay-friendly practices and behaviors, to create a community gathering place while maintaining the property, to provide a key opportunity to expand partnerships and increase volunteerism, and to expand programs responsive to the needs of the community.

Environmental Education Programs

The EcoCenter offers a wide range of environmental education programs focused on the restoration and protection of the bay. The center is a gathering place for meetings, talks, exhibits, and public educational programs, and it further strengthens Save Barnegat Bay's commitment to education, conservation, and environmental stewardship in the community.

Activities

Activities at the EcoCenter include guided nature walks and talks, bird counts, outdoor classroom areas, strategically located educational kiosks, workshops, seminars, hands-on activities, demonstration gardens and low-impact landscaping, kayaking and boat-based educational programming, clean-ups, environmental inventory, water quality testing, and research. Additionally, there is opportunity for restoration in targeted areas on the property including removal of invasive plant species and the replanting of native plants.

The EcoCenter is in need of the following items: tools (shovels, rakes, screw drivers, a Dremel tool, etc.), waders (kid and adult sizes), craft supplies, paper towels, snacks for volunteers (granola bars, fresh fruit, chips), office supplies, a bike rack, and an outdoor grill. The EcoCenter is located at 117 Haines Road in Toms River.

piloting a number of free programs for the public both at the EcoCenter and throughout the Barnegat Bay Watershed. This October, Save Barnegat Bay will host its inaugural, three-day conference titled "Charting a Course for Barnegat Bay," which is open to the public. Attendees will have the opportunity to interact directly with representatives from the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection while learning about the bay's next chapter as a natural resource for the Jersey Shore and plans for further improving its water quality.

Wenzel recommends that all Jersey Shore residents, especially those who are newer to the watershed area, learn the area's history so that they can fully appreciate their connection to the local environment. "People miss the fundamentals of observation," she said. "Being local is about opening your eyes and ears, knowing your neighbors, and paying attention. Find an old-time local, perhaps the guy down the street with the overgrown yard. These folks know more about your neighborhood and the bay than anyone else."

Wenzel's passion for advocacy, devotion to the ecosystem, and leadership as executive director has undoubtedly been one of the driving forces behind the EcoCenter's substantial growth and the organization's commitment to charting a course for a cleaner Barnegat Bay.

"I don't walk away when I see something I can fix. A healthy bay is what every single person living at or visiting the Jersey Shore deserves," she said. ♦

Save Barnegat Bay is a registered, community-based nonprofit 501(c)(3) organization with a record of accomplishment. Many members and donors generously support the work of the organization with their time, and the group provides flexibility and a strong foundation from which to grow. The Anchor & Palette Gallery had been in existence in Bay Head since the 1960s, passed down from artist Hubie Rose to artist Dick LaBonté, and then to his daughter, Anne LaBonté Neff. Representing many of New Jersey's finest artists, it was a favorite stop for summer visitors. After Superstorm Sandy and the massive destruction on the Jersey Shore, more time was invested by LaBonté's daughter in developing a website to introduce visitors to the world Dick LaBonté created during the last thirty years of his life. Each painting on the site has a story and a detailed description, a combination of actual historical facts and LaBonté's creative imagination. Some of the writings are from the artist's book, Dick LaBonté - Paintings of the Jersey Shore and More (published by Jersey Shore Publications - see page 8.) The rest has been added based on several books about the Jersey Shore and other research. To quote the artist, "When you look at my pictures, you are not supposed to wear a serious expression. You are expected to smile, perhaps wistfully and with a sense of loss. Often while I paint, I laugh aloud. You have my permission to do likewise." Flight or Plight?

Super Monarchs, Migration, and Milkweed

by Christine Menapace

Butterflies have a unique ability to capture our imaginations. Adorned with bright colors in stunning patterns, with paper-thin wings and a gentle fluttering motion, they are seemingly touched by the divine. But their delicate appearance can belie their strength, particularly in the case of monarchs, which make the farthest migratory journey of any known insect.

Super Monarchs

While western monarchs travel down the coast of California, the eastern monarchs we encounter in late summer and fall (peak migration for our area is September 14 - 26) migrate all the way from southern Canada down to the oyamel fir forests of the Sierra Madre mountains in central Mexico. Dubbed “super monarchs,” they may fly as much as fifty to one hundred miles per day, with a total journey of up to three thousand miles at completion.

Super monarchs are distinct from the generations of monarchs that come before and after them. They are born in late summer, travel south, overwinter in Mexico, and then travel to the southern U.S. where they mate and lay eggs, in a lifecycle spanning roughly eight months. By contrast, the monarchs born in the south travel northward in much smaller distances and live much shorter lives, only about a month or so. They lay eggs a few days after emerging from their cocoon and it can take as many as four or even five generations to reach Canada and for another super monarch to be born. Clearly, the monarchs we encounter heading south in early fall are very special creatures.

With such an immense journey in front of them, super monarchs are very reliant on finding the right food and shelter along the way. To complicate matters, monarchs will only lay their eggs on one type of plant—milkweed. As open spaces and wild meadows give way to building development, and pesticide use becomes widespread, monarch populations are at risk. According to the Center for Biological Diversity, monarchs have lost an estimated 165 million acres of breeding habitat in the U.S. due to herbicide use and development. While other factors, like weather in any given year, can affect numbers, in the past two decades eastern monarchs have declined by more than 80%, according to the Xerces Society (www.xerces.org).

But there is good news. With awareness spreading in the last few years, eastern monarchs actually showed an increase of 144% over last year's count, its highest in over a decade. Preliminary reports for this year also seem favorable. Yet experts are only cautiously optimistic. "This reprieve from bad news on monarchs is a thank-you from the butterflies to all the people who planted native milkweeds and switched to organic corn and soy products," comments Tierra Curry, a senior scientist at the Center for Biological Diversity. "But one good weather year won't save the monarch in the long run, and more protections are needed for this migratory wonder..." And unfortunately, news on the other coast is dire for western monarchs whose populations have declined 99.5% in coastal California since the 1980s, reports Xerces.

Growing Nectar Plants

One of the best things residents can do to help protect monarch populations is grow pesticide-free, butterfly-friendly pollinator plants in their yard. (When buying an established plant from a nursery, ensure that the grower has not treated it with systemic insecticides.)

According to the New Jersey Chapter of the North American Butterfly Association (NJNABA), the following native plants will provide life sustaining food to butterflies of all types: Asters, Black-eyed Susan, Blue Flag Iris, Blazing-Star, Blue Giant Hyssop, Boneset, Cup Plant, Eastern Blue Stars, Goldenrods, Indian-Hemp, Joe-Pye Weed, Milkweeds, Mistflower, Mountainmint, NY Ironweed, Oxeye, Fall Phlox, Pickerelweed, Giant Hyssop, Spreading Dogbane, Sunflowers, Thistle, Wild Bergamot, and Wild Geranium.

Recommended native shrubs and trees are: Blackberry, Bottlebrush Buckeye, Buttonbush, NJ Tea, Shrub Dogwoods, Coastal Sweetpepperbush, Eastern Redbud, and Sourwood.

Non-native nectar plants listed by the NJNABA include: Catmint, Purpletop Verbena, French Marigold, Lavender, Lily, Mexican Sunflower, Purple Coneflower, Salvia, Scabiosa (Pincushion), Sedum, Zinnia, Tropical Milkweed, and Lantana.

Non-native shrubs include Butterfly Bush, Caryopteris, and Lilac.

Keep in mind that just because a plant provides nectar for butterflies, doesn't mean it will be a good choice for your yard. Black-eyed Susans, for example, can spread like crazy, and butterfly bush is considered an invasive. Talk to your local garden center about the best choices for you.

Additional elements that can be added to the garden for butterflies include: places that provide shelter from wind and rain; dark stones or tiles for warming up; and wet, sandy, or muddy spots to imbibe salts and other nutrients.

Milkweed: The Only Monarch Host Plant

Besides the many attractive annuals and perennials that provide nectar to fuel the monarch's long journey, milkweed is an absolute necessity for egg laying and considered a "host" plant, as mentioned previously. There's actually over one hundred different types of milkweed, so be sure to plant one native to New Jersey for best results. Unfortunately, besides Butterfly weed, which is increasingly available at garden centers, it can be difficult to find the other varieties for sale. And while many grow in the wild, digging plants or taking seeds from local parks is not allowed, and transplanting established milkweed is notoriously difficult.

Luckily, RareFind Nursery in Jackson is a knowledgeable, local source for milkweed, although they are currently sold out this autumn. "We restocked three times this season," comments Keriann Scott, nursery manager. When asked if that's an indication of growing awareness, Scott replies, "Yes and no. The average person still doesn't have a clue. But we're at a turning point in our trade. With not only the monarchs, but all pollinators, like bees, the concern is up and coming. People are asking about true natives and pesticide spraying. Those into gardening understand it and we've seen Eagle Scout and Girl Scout projects emphasizing rebuilding habitats."

These are the native varieties of milkweed Scott recommends:

- Common (Asclepias syriaca). Likes sunny areas and meadows. Grows easily but spreads by rhizomes and can be invasive. Forms colonies of tall, single stems up to five feet and has pinkish purple flowers.
- Swamp (Asclepias incarnata). Likes sun to part shade and moist soils. Grows about three to six feet tall and has light pink flowers varying from near white (called Ice Ballet) to purple.

- Butterfly (Asclepias tuberosa). Likes sun and well-drained, sandy soils, and can tolerate drought. Has attractive bright orange or yellow (look for Hello Yellow or Blonde Bombshell varieties) flowers on branching stems that are about one and a half feet tall. It has clear rather than milky sap like the others.

"We'll definitely have Common, Swamp, and Butterfly next spring," says Scott. They may also have Horsetail (Asclepias verticillata) with whitish flowers and wispier, thin leaves. "But it's best to start with Common or Swamp," comments Scott, who recommends ideally planting between tax day and Mother's day.

For those who want to get started right away, another way to plant milkweed is by spreading seeds in mulch this fall. Fall seeding allows the milkweed seeds to naturally go through cold stratification, a necessary process some seeds require to break dormancy and germinate in the spring. "Don't get discouraged, it can take a few times before seeding works," comments Scott.

If you're having difficulty finding seeds, check out the Milkweed Market at Monarch Watch (www.monarchwatch.org/milkweed/market). They will only ship plants to the ecoregion from which the seeds originated. It's expensive and a current search for our area showed all varieties were sold out, but there's also a helpful list of Milkweed Market Vendors throughout the country. Additionally, free milkweed is available for large-scale restoration projects or for schools or non-profits. There's even recommendations on indoor seed starting.

Waystations and Tagging

Besides the Milkweed Market, Monarch Watch (www.monarch-watch.org) has other programs for monarch education, research, and advocacy. One is the Monarch Waystation certification, where a garden that meets the requirements, such as ten or more milkweed plants, can be officially recognized. As of August 2019, 26,058 Waystations have been registered with Monarch Watch.

Another is the Tagging Program, whereby everyday people become "citizen scientists" who capture migrating monarchs, record the tag code, tag date, gender of the butterfly, and geographic location, then tag and release them. Akin to lightweight stickers, the tags help answer questions about the origin of monarchs that reach Mexico, the timing and pace of the migration, and changes in geographic distribution. A kit of twenty-five tags can be obtained from Monarch Watch for $15. Also, free tagging demonstrations are held each year at the Manasquan Reservoir Environmental Center in Howell (in September) and New Jersey Audubon holds them at the East Shelter at Cape May Point State Park (in September and early October).

Tagging by "citizen scientists" was first used by Dr. Fred Urquhart as early as the 1940s. A Canadian professor, he was fascinated with monarchs and wanted to know how far they traveled and where they headed every winter. Long before the Internet and GPS, he put ads in local newspapers and magazines asking for tagging help. While much was learned about the monarchs' flight paths, their destination remained a mystery until thirty-five years later. In 1975, an American visiting Mexico knew about Urquhart's program and noticed the abundance of monarchs. He was then hired by Urquhart and spent two years searching the countryside until he finally discovered a forest laden with millions of monarchs clustered in colonies. When butterflies bearing Urquhart's tags were found, they knew they had discovered the destination of the migrating monarchs. In 1986, the Mexican government, recognizing the importance of the oyamel forests, created the Monarch Butterfly Biosphere Reserve.

Creating the Reserve in Mexico was an important step in saving monarchs, but so too is saving habitats in our own area. In 2013, members of the NJNABA, in collaboration with Kingwood Township officials and a local naturalist, developed a Habitat Management Plan to promote the conservation of butterflies, other pollinators, and grassland birds on Horseshoe Bend Preserve in Hunterdon County. According to the NJNABA, anyone is welcome to use the plan as a basis to develop management for other areas. Find it at: www.naba.org/chapters/nabanj/habitats/HBP_Management_Plan_2013.pdf. ♦

Choose & Cut Your Own Christmas Tree Guide

For many families, cutting their own Christmas tree is a tradition that becomes one of their fondest memories of the holiday season. Listed are farms in Monmouth and Ocean counties where families can choose and cut their own tree—or purchase one freshly cut by the workers on the farm. No axes or chain saws are permitted. Customers can either bring their own saw or the farm will provide one. Please call ahead to make sure trees are still available and to ask questions that will help make your visit more enjoyable

Seeking to Balance Reality

It has been said that the true subject of the photograph is the photographer.

Frederick Ballet grew up in Brooklyn and from an early age was fascinated with the natural world. Keenly interested in biology and comparative anatomy, he attended college and medical school, and after graduation and postdoctoral training, became a hand surgeon. In time, he married, had twin boys (now both married), became a grandfather, built a wooden sailboat, and earned a third degree black belt in karate.

Ballet's photography as a teenager was limited to taking pictures of landscapes and zoo animals on an Olympus film camera. His father had a passing interest in photography, and they worked in the darkroom together. Family and work commitments took their toll on his available time, and it was in retirement that he was able to commit fully to his renewed passion. When not taking pictures, he can be found kite surfing, stand up paddle boarding, sailing, or fishing.

Ballet feels fortunate to live at the beach, which gives him the ability to capture it at different times of the day and year. Says Ballet, "The beauty of the natural world has always filled me with an existential fascination. As a young boy I would often go down to the sea, never disappointed in her embrace of peaceful solitude. I now revel in capturing her special moments of equanimity, movement, color, light, power, and immortality."

He continues, "In my work, I seek to balance realism with abstraction, at times capturing the surreal. My favorite images give the viewer the smallest anchor of reality, leaving the rest to the imagination. My goal is for you to leave with a meditative sense of beauty, peace, and timelessness."

Frederick Ballet's work can be seen in select galleries and at shows along the Jersey Shore. Please refer to page 57 for more information.

Ballet's work can be seen and purchased at Artifacts and Company in Beach Haven, Refind Gallery in Bay Head, Tumblety Howell Art Gallery and Custom Framing in Ocean Grove, Main Street Gallery in Manasquan, and Wildflowers II in Barnegat Light. All works can be purchased as archival pigment prints with sizes and editions upon request.

archs before they were forgotten by the literal sands of time. I photographed them as I found them. Some just barely distinguishable as fragments of orange peeked from the sand. Others, incredibly untouched, as if just plucked from the sky. I couldn't help but surmise that some had simply dropped from flight, exhausted from battling fierce coastal winds. Yet instead of finding food and respite, they found a cruel ecosystem devoid of shelter for a fragile winged insect. I began to wonder if it would be environmentally sound to add milkweed to the dune grasses, which are so essential in erosion prevention. (Months later, I got my answer. The town of Belmar did just this—implementing milkweed and other pollen-rich plants at its Fourth Avenue 'dune garden!')

Jill Lang

Before long, I had a collection of photographs depicting their felled splendor, a testament to the perils of their miraculous annual journey. It was so incredibly sad, yet a perverse honor to be able to touch and examine them so closely. I can only hope to never encounter such a phenomenon again.

Poetry

Metamorphosis

She hid caterpillars
 in rusted cans,
 put the open end
 in a hole
 of the wall.
 No escape. Yet
 they drew breath...
 What did she know
 of mysteries? Days later, kneeling before the wall, she found no caterpillars
 in the untouched can.
 Now she searches
 the world for butterflies.

—Frank Finale

The Jar

I loved your bold orange black & white since childhood when I stalked you.
 You dazzled my eyes. I tried to capture you, and did; put you in a jelly jar with holes in its tin top, showed you to my mom.
 She said, a wry smile on her butterfly beautiful face, You should set them free. They'll die in that jar.
 I knew so little then loved what she knew. I was eight when she died. I remember those monarchs I set free into a blue summer. The empty jar
 I held, on our green lawn.

The Beachscape

Offerings Of Sea, Tide, and Wind

by Christine Menapace

It was an unseasonably warm day in mid-October and my family had decided to take our two dogs to the Sea Bright beach. Just a little over a month ago, the beach had been packed with tourists, beach umbrellas, and sun worshippers. Now it was unmistakably off-season. The beach club was shuttered, the sky was gray, and the dogs were running wild with off-leash abandon.

I too, was in off-season beach mode. Eyes normally focused on children riding waves or a horizon sunset were instead drawn to the fascinating detritus of high tide. In summer, the sand was too clean, maintained and picked over by visitors, lifeguards, and seagulls. But the tidal lines of autumn storms were a treasure trove of unusual shells, driftwood, feathers, crab remains, and more. I loved scouring the sands of the off-season beach.

Like most people, I had spent many years collecting shells. My fascination varied from year to year depending on what I found new, unusual, or simply prevalent that season. One year it was unbroken bay scallop shells. Another, it was all about the pearly iridescence of jingle shells. Still another was about finding the largest surf clam shells. When on vacation at the Delaware Bay near Cape May, it was all about whelks. I would coat some shells with clear nail polish to bring out the hues. I would pile some in mason jars. I would line up others on windowsills.

With an overflowing trove of shells, I became more interested in the beautiful organic forms and patina of driftwood. I would bring home different sizes and shapes and place them at structural angles in planted pots, lean them against my house, or simply throw a tangle onto a table. My children even helped me drag home an enormous piece that now sits on my patio, succulents planted in one of its undulating curves.

In recent years, I've also been drawn to feathers. Often too wet, sandy, or mangled to reclaim, every once in a while a fluffy gull's feather would present itself and find a home in one of my vases.

But on this day in October, the beach issued an offering I had never encountered in my many, many years of beachcombing. My young daughter was the first to notice. "Oh no! Look Mom, it's one of those butterflies. But it's dead." She came running to me with a sand encrusted monarch in her hands. While deceased, the delicate creature was nevertheless intact and still beautiful. We examined its gorgeous, bright orange and black wings, thin as tissue paper but stiff and crumbly from the drying effects of salt, sand, and sun.

It wasn't long until I spotted another dead monarch laying in the sand. I picked it up to show my daughter, but before I could yell to her, I spotted yet another. And another. And another. Like a scene in a movie when a character looks around and has the sudden dawning realization of the full extent of what is happening, I came to see there were dozens, if not hundreds, of dead monarchs scattered across the beach. Many were partially or nearly fully covered in sand, providing just enough disguise to initially hide the scope of the tragedy. I realized that, within just a day or two, the deaths of these beauties would most likely be fully obscured by sand and wind.

As an avid gardener, I had heard about the plight of these awe-inspiring butterflies. Traveling from southern Canada to central Mexico, they migrate an amazing 3,000 miles each fall. That is, if they make it. In the past two decades, the number of monarchs who are able to complete this trip has been decreasing dramatically due to loss of habitat and pesticides. As a result, word has gone out among naturalists and gardeners to help them along their journey by planting milkweed and sources of nectar.

As I walked the beach, I became determined to somehow preserve the stilled brilliance of these perished mon-
